He reiterated the importance of the work of all provinces, cities and counties across the country to take steps for isolating all working, production and residential units from each other while locking down their areas and providing their inhabitants with every convenience in curbing the spread of the malignant virus.

The Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea convened a consultative meeting at the office building of the Party Central Committee on May 14 to overhaul the top emergency epidemic prevention system under operation and take additional political and practical measures.

The Political Bureau discussed political and practical measures for rapidly curbing and controlling the nationwide spread of the disease so as to firmly hold the strategic initiative.

The respected General Secretary said that just as the worldwide spread of COVID-19 is very serious, the spread of this malignant disease can be claimed to be a great upheaval in our country since the founding of the DPRK, but we can surely overcome the crisis if we do not lose balance in carrying out the epidemic prevention policy but maintain the strong organizing ability and control based on the single-minded unity of the Party and the people and intensify the epidemic prevention campaign.

The meeting focused on the issue of timely supply of reserve medicines, which would be urgently released as required by the top emergency epidemic prevention system.

It held an in-depth discussion of the ways to minimize the losses of lives by reasonably applying scientific treatment tactics and methods to different patients including fevered persons with special constitutional conditions and timely cope with the disease spread while observing its progress more closely.

Stressing again the rationality and efficiency of the regional blocking and unit-isolation steps taken by the Party and government actively and decisively, he called on the emergency epidemic prevention units at all levels to more scrupulously organize the operation for and command over the epidemic prevention work in their regions and units to surely reverse the trend of the spread of the disease.

In order to overcome the present public health crisis quickly, it is important to raise public awareness of scientific epidemic prevention, he noted, calling upon the curative and preventive and other relevant organs to scrupulously organize the work for informing the broad masses of the people of the general knowledge needed for the prevention and treatment of the epidemic, produce diverse presentations and programmes for improving the understanding of the masses at the same time and widely disseminate them through mass media.

The virtues and feelings of helping and taking care of one another which prevail our society in any adversities are the key to and guarantee of great victory in the epidemic prevention campaign, which is more powerful than any latest medical science and technologies, he said, calling upon all the Party organizations to scrupulously conduct the organizational and political work so that our best communist virtues and beautiful traits, which no one on earth can possess or imitate, are given fuller play in the present difficult and rigorous epidemic prevention campaign.

Noting that the time has come when our Party Central Committee will prove its leading role once again in the face of the trials of history, he said that it is time for us to more deeply realize for what we are needed and for whom we have to fight at the cost of our lives, and that our Party will bravely discharge its important responsibility and duty and take full responsibility for the security and safety of the country and people by displaying infinite loyalty and devotion, and repeatedly expressed his determination and will to win great victory in the epidemic prevention campaign without fail.

Saying that he was donating reserve medicines prepared by his family to the Party committee of the WPK Central Committee out of his resolution to always share his destiny with the people and with a fervent prayer that peace and laughter would settle again in all families across the country at an early date, he asked the Party committee to send the medicines to a family in difficulty.

He pointed out a series of deviations revealed in the overall anti-epidemic work and took practical measures for correcting them immediately.

He said that if all leading officials do not exert themselves and fully display their fighting spirit, extraordinary ability and wisdom, they cannot take the strategic initiative in the ongoing anti-epidemic war.

Stressing that officials should not allow any slightest imperfection and vulnerable points by maintaining high tension and vigilance in the acute anti-epidemic war and scrupulously organizing and guiding every work in a scientific way, he said that they should lead the anti-epidemic campaign with effective work and beneficial results.

The meeting also discussed the issue of improving the state's administrative control over the emergency anti-epidemic work, the issue of thoroughly ensuring hygienic safety of medicines at pharmacies, the issue of further strengthening legal control over the anti-epidemic work and the issue of enhancing the state's capability for coping with crisis.

demanded most now and how much they cost.

He stressed the need to correct the vulnerable points in the medicine supply system and take strong measures for transporting medicines.

Noting that today's anti-epidemic campaign is that of the people, for the people and by the people, he repeatedly called on all the officials to make selfless, devoted efforts for the good of the people with the mindset that they would bear full responsibility for the security and wellbeing of the country and the people.

Education with Abacus Encouraged

1. Abacus education for children begins as a part of game.
2. It arouses children's interests in numbers and calculation.
3. Children cultivate the capability of imagining an abacus.
4. Calculating speed is gradually increased.
5. Digits are added.

The effectiveness of education with abacus at kindergartens and primary schools is being recognized by many people. Experts in children's education and psychology say that an outstanding capability for mental calculation is created in the right cerebral hemisphere of the children who have received education through abacus systematically. They insist that if children are drilled in the fast calculation of the four fundamental arithmetic rules with abacus, their capability for memorizing, thinking and imagination grows remarkably. Teachers are of the same opinion. Choe Un Hui, teacher at November 3 Kindergarten in Moranbong District,

Pyongyang, says that many children are more interested in learning how to calculate with abacus than in learning arithmetic in writing, singing or dancing. She has found that the rate of their understanding through learning with abacus is far higher than that of the conventional arithmetic lessons.

Education with abacus is widely introduced to kindergartens and primary schools across the country.

She confirms that nine out of ten children who have learned calculating with abacus are fast in mental calculation.

Experts say that education with abacus is most effective among children aged between 4 and 12; they gradually get the capability of imagining an abacus and its beads sliding up and down, and with this capability growing they become capable of receiving, storing and re-producing information in a short period of time.

Now many kindergartens and primary schools have introduced and are intensifying education with abacus.

Seen frequently on TV are children who calculate the four arithmetic rules of six digits while singing or rope skipping.

Traditional Children's Garment

Striped Jacket

The traditional garments for the Korean children are similar to those for adults in shape, but they look smart for the colour and ornament that cater to the juvenile feelings.

Striped jacket is typical of them.

In particular, girls wearing skirts of such clear and bright colours as pink, red and yellow below striped jackets and colourful hoods, ribbons or trinkets make them look lively.

The collar, strings and cuffs of the jacket are trimmed with coloured cloth pieces printed with gilded flower patterns or meaningful letters or with embroideries.

The sleeves are usually finished with red, yellow, green, blue, pink, purple and white pieces of cloth.

The breast is also decorated with such cloth pieces or with their mixture.

The collar is finished with light-coloured pieces that go well with the colour of the sleeves.

The girl's jacket is rather short in harmony with the skirt.

The boy's jacket is so long that it reaches beneath the waist, and the breast is tied by a string. The trousers are usually bluish.

What catches the people's eyes in the boy's attire are the overcoat that flutters even in a breeze and the dagger and wallet dangling on the waist.

The overcoat as long as the knee, the hood of a weighty colour and the dagger on the waist make him cut a manly figure.

The jacket is made with different cloths according to season, woven in different colours or patched with pieces of different colours.

There is a jacket with three-coloured shoulders.

As the coloured jacket looks beautiful and smart and caters to the children's emotions, parents make it so that their children can wear it on holidays or when visiting others.

Children playing folk games on holidays in beautiful traditional clothes can be seen in various parts of the country.

TELEMEDICINE SYSTEM

Established across Country

Telemedicine system has been established in provincial, city, county and ri people's hospitals across the country.

The telemedicine system is proving its viability in the DPRK.

From 2009 to 2012, this system was established in four central hospitals, ten provincial and municipal hospitals, 190 city and county hospitals and ten provincial maternity hospitals. The system has expanded year after year.

Since then, it has become a convention to hold consultation between regional hospitals and provincial and national hospitals on serious cases and patients whose diseases are difficult to diagnose. Many people have enjoyed the benefit of the system, and advanced treatment methods have been applied with the result that the medical skills of the regional hospitals have been improved steadily.

Such national hospitals as the Kim Man Yu Hospital, Pyongyang Maternity Hospital,

Pyongyang University of Medical Sciences Hospital, Koryo Medicine General Hospital and Okryu Children's Hospital have given opinions and advices to the regional hospitals through this system, contributing to curing many serious or intractable cases.

And regional hospitals have strived to get the patients to receive more reliable diagnoses and treatment through this system.

Last year the public health sector worked hard to introduce this system in the medical preventive and treatment units at the lowest echelons.

With the efforts for further improving the system being strengthened at various units, scientific accuracy is being ensured in diagnosis and treatment, and the system's viability and advantages are being given full play. And the medical workers, mindful of the significance of the system in providing the people with quality medical service, are trying their best to introduce advanced treatment methods in their clinical practices.

Songchon Silk

Songchon silk, representative of the Phyongan provincial area, was renowned not only in the country but also in the neighbouring countries.

The local people, encouraging silkworm raising by cultivating mulberry trees that grow well in their region, a basin surrounded by high and low mountains, inherited their unique silk producing methods down through the generations.

The Songchon Silk Mill furnished with modern equipment is now carrying forward the tradition.

Songchon is one of the major tobacco-cultivating areas for its favourable weather and soil conditions.

Songchon Tobacco

Korea, called a land of the golden tapestry from olden times, boasts magnificent scenery on and under the ground.

The Songgam Cave, located on the border area between Kaechon and Anju in South Pyongan Province, was established as a recreational site some 20 years ago.

As a natural cave formed through the long process of the erosion of dolomite which occurred about a billion years ago, it offers fabulous ensemble of stalactites and stalagmites of myriad shapes.

The cave is divided into 16 sections, including Phokphodong (falls section), Kiamdong (mysterious rocks section), Solgyongdong (snowscape section), Surimdong (forest section), Pomuldong (treasure section), Jangsudong (longevity section) and Ryonggungdong (dragon king's palace section). They are made up of more than 70 scenic spots, such as 6-metre-high Tansim Falls, Pidanphokpho (silk falls) Rock, and Janggom (sword) Rock which is a stalactite 4.2 metres high and 1.9 tons heavy. And Jangsu Pool and the lotus-shaped stone flower on it found in Jangsudong are uncommon sights rare to be seen in other underground resorts.

Unlike other caves, this cave is inclined upward from the entrance to the last district, and a 2 160m-long route has been laid out for tourism.

People visit the cave all the year round and enjoy the unique scenery.

The cave attracts people for its unique scenery

A research group of the History Faculty of Kim Il Sung University unearthed cave relics of the Palaeolithic era in Rimgyong Workers' District of Kangdong County in Pyongyang and intensified research into the relics to scientifically illuminate the appearance of the relics.

During the archaeological survey conducted in the Kangdong area of Pyongyang, the group paid attention to a natural cave in the workers' district and started full-scale excavation.

They discovered seven human (neolithic man) fossils, over 300 animal bone fossils in nine kinds and 274 pieces of fossil spore and pollen in the cultural layer (second layer) of the Palaeolithic era.

The electron paramagnetic resonance (EPR) measurement was conducted to confirm that the relics are dated to 23 000±3 000 years ago, and human fossils (teeth and skull bones) were those of a woman in her 30s, who lived in the latter period of the Palaeolithic age.

The DPRK Archaeology Society deliberated on the fossils discovered in the natural cave of the district and named it Kangdong Woman after the place name.

According to the deliberation of the non-permanent tangible cultural heritage deliberation and assessment committee and the Cabinet decision, the Rimgyong cave relics have been put on a list for preservation.

The discovery of Kangdong Woman in the Kangdong area, Pyongyang, where there is the tomb of Tangun, the founding father of the Korean nation, is of great importance in anthropologically clarifying that people had lived consecutively in the area since the dawn of human civilization to create time-honoured history and culture.
